

HEATMAP SHOWING CONCENTRATION OF MENTIONED LOCATIONS IN THE WORKS OF JOYCE

The heatmap shows that there is unsurprisingly a concentration of location data in the Dublin region. However, the map shows a spread of data across the United Kingdom also, which stretches towards Paris. This reflects the European orientation of Joyce's ideology, however, as we will see in the next map, the data uncovered a surprisingly low amount of mentions in the regions of Ancient Greece, which was a central source of inspiration in Joyce's works.

The heatmaps also uncovered a mild concentration of locations in North America, mainly in the United States. However, it remains to be seen how many of these reference locations which have been subsequently named after European locations. Nonetheless, regardless of whether these were the locations in the mind of the writer, the map still shows a thread through the works of Joyce to the contemporary geography of the world.

Cape Horn, Argentina

Muglins Lighthouse, Dublin

“Tut, tut! cries Le Fécondateur, tripping in, my friend Monsieur Moore, that most accomplished traveller (I have just cracked a half bottle avec lui in a circle of the best wits of the town), is my authority that in Cape Horn, ventre biche, they have a rain that will wet through any, even the stoutest cloak. A drenching of that violence, he tells me, sans blague, has sent more than one luckless fellow in good earnest posthaste to another world.”

Ulysses, Ch 14

Buck Mulligan turned suddenly for an instant towards Stephen but did not speak. In the bright silent instant Stephen saw his own image in cheap dusty mourning between their gay attires.

—It’s a wonderful tale, Haines said, bringing them to halt again. Eyes, pale as the sea the wind had freshened, paler, firm and prudent. The seas’ ruler, he gazed southward over the bay, empty save for the smokeplume of the mailboat vague on the bright skyline and a sail tacking by the Muglins.
